Editorial

The year, 2022 marks BUIITEMS' 20th anniversary and we have much to celebrate as we reflect on two decades of growth and expansion in terms of number, infrastructure, influence and social mobility.

It has been a 20-year-long journey of ups and downs, learning and camaraderie, trust and love which we have traversed on the path to excellence. A story that started as a humble endeavour has now become an epic saga in the academic space of Pakistan's higher education. The voyage of BUIITEMS has been fraught with tides of hopes, ordeals and episodes of fabled achievements and success stories. Our team of teachers, administrative personnel and our leadership have immensely supported us in bringing the enormity and present exalted state to our institution.

BUIITEMS, during these two decades, has achieved many milestones. The centre of excellence, BUTIEMS has twice been selected as the global hub for Sustainable Development Goal 8 i.e. Decent Work and Economic Growth, by the United Nations Academic Impact (UNAI).

Quetta Literary Festival, an initiative of BUIITEMS has been successfully arranged thrice. The 3rd Quetta Literary Festival has proved to be the real hope in the restoration of art and literature. This year's theme – Culture Yesterday & Today – featured renowned intellectuals in the different fields of art, writing, politics, environmental conservation, and academia.

BUIITEMS has made significant advancements in its pursuit of excellence in research and quality education. In face of challenges, the university has undertaken great efforts to develop a research-oriented culture that reflects BUIITEMS values and commitment to generating knowledge.

Our journey of quality and excellence is still on with the utmost zest and zeal. We have a number of future plans that include the establishment of a law school, the establishment of the BUIITEMS School System (kindergarten to A Level), a Center of excellence for results based Monitoring & Evaluation, a centre of excellence for vocational education, and the establishment of University College of Kalat and Dalbandin, and the establishment of School of Artificial Intelligence. For us, Sky is the limit and we hope, pray and work for betterment of not just the institute but help our pupil lead lives of purpose.

From the uttermost marrows of our hearts, we extend our gratitude and thankfulness to all our BUIITEMS family members for their perpetual and consistent support, dedication and hard work.

Unraveling the coupled Human-Natural Systems in the Indus Basin

Reported by: Sahar Munir

Dr. Abubakr Muhammad, Associate Professor and Chair Electrical Engineer LUMS on March 17, 2022, discussed with faculty members "Unraveling the coupled Human-Natural Systems in the Indus Basin." He received his Ph.D. in Electrical Engineering from Georgia-Tech, USA, winning an institute-wide best Ph.D. Dissertation Award. He received postdoctoral fellowships at the University of Pennsylvania and McGill University. Since 2008, his group at LUMS has done applied research in robotics and automation with applications to water, agriculture, and the environment. He has held visiting positions at other top institutes, including the University of Oxford, ICTP, and KAUST. He serves on various advisory panels to government agencies and industry on the use of emerging digital technologies. In his talk, we found two examples of social hydrological models relevant to the Indus. First, agent-based models in which information-based irrigation advisory services can be leveraged to explore new water allocation and distribution modes. Second, a look at the so-called irrigation efficiency paradox, whereby investments in water conservation solutions increase the net consumption of water. Finally, review insights from new integrated assessment models that help navigate the complex policy landscape of the Water-Energy-Food nexus of the Indus.
